RUMANIA ASKS FOR AID

Germany Offers to Pay for Dutch Freighter Sunk Off American Coast.

ROME, Oct. 14.—Along the first line battle front on the Carso plateau the Italians have advanced, as a result of the third day of the big new battle, the war office announced today. It was added that General Cadorna's forces now are facing the Austrian second line.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—German troops penetrated the village of Albaincourt, sout hof the Somme river, but were quickly driven out by a French counter attack, it was announced today in the official communique of the French war office.

Further progress has been made by the French north of the Somme The hardest fighting, however, has centered south of the river during the past 24 hours.

After violent artillery preparation the Germans attacked at Ablaincourt and succeeded in making their way into the northeast corner of the village.

Before the Germans could consolidate their new position the French launched counter attacks, pressing the Teutons back to their original lines.

AMSTERDAM, O.., 14.—Germany is willing to make reparation for the destruction of the Dutch freighter Bloomersdjk off the American coast last Sunday by a submarine. A despatch from Berlin today says that the Dutch ship was sunk "contrary to orders" and that the imperial government is willing to pay indemnity.

The Bloomersdjk was carrying a cargo of grain from the United States to Holland when she was sunk. The ship and its cargo were valued at $1,500,000.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Norman Prince, an American member of the aviation corps, has had both legs broken in an aeroplane accident. It was announced today that he was progressing favorably. Prince, who is from Boston, is one of the foremost members of the Americ. n contingent in the French air service.

RUMANIA .PPEALS FOR HELP.

Retreat of Ferdinand's Army Continues Unchecked.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The appeal of King Ferdinand and utterances in parlimanet have aroused much anxiety here over the fate of Rumania, as the German allies under General von Falkenhayn and Field Marshal von Mackensen keep pounding away at her on two sides.

Official advices received today from Bucharest were more optimistic claiming to have checked the Austro-German advance at some points. However, Berlin reports that the pursuit of the fleeing Rumanian army is still in progress.

The Chronicle today printed a despatch from its Athens correspondent quoting King Constantine as saying that within 15 days Rumania have been completely in the hands of the Germans. Constantine is declared to have added that his own country will probably share the same fate if she joined the allies.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—About 100 aeroplanes were engaged in the mighty air battle over Obendorf-on-Neckar, in which 15 machines were shot down, it is reported in advices reaching here today.

The advance guard of the allied armada of 40 machines appeared near Obendorf-on-Neckar Thursday morning with the intention of attacking the Mauser munitions plant. The news of the approach of the allied machines had been telephoned ahead and German war planes were ready to give battle.

At times there were so many machines in the air that the sun was obscured and the roar of scores of machine guns in action at once coupled with bursting of bombs gave the impression of a gigantic engagement. The munitions plant was not damaged but a number of houses were demolished and five persons were killed. Nine allied and six German machines were shot down.

BRITISH SHIP IS CHASED BY TEUTON U-BOAT

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—The steamer Bovic, which reported by wireless yesterday that she had seen a submarine 200 miles east of New York, arrived here today. There were conflicting reports on the submarine story following the ship's arrival.

The captain denied to reporters that a submarine had been seen, but the pilot who brought the ship up the bay said that the captain had told him that a German submarine had not only been seen but chased the Bovic. The vessel was followed for some time but the presence of a gun mounted on her stern is believed by the pilot to have saved the ship.

The last seen of the submarine, according to the pilot's story, she was chasing the Danish ship Helligolav, which sailed from this port earlier in the week.

The Bovic is a British freighter and sailed from Manchester.

The Helligolav sailed from this port for Copenhagen on Thursday carrying many passengers and a general cargo. Belief was expressed in maritime circles that the submarine would not sink the liner but that the vessel was being chased to establish her nationality.

Captain John Hall, the pilot who brought the Bovic up the bay, told the following story:

"On the bridge coming up the bay Captain Jones of the Bovic told me that his lookout sighted the U-53 while steaming about 60 miles east of Nantucket at 8 o'clock Friday morning. She was about a mile astern. As soon as the submarine was sighted, the gun crew was assembled. No shots were fired, although sailors were sure they would have sunk the 'U' boat.

PRESIDENT REPLIES TO HUGHES AS TO FOREIGN POLICY

SHADOW LAWN, LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 14.—One of the features of President Wilson's speech to Pennsylvania democrats this afternoon was expected to be an adroit reply to Charles Evans Hughes' declaration as to what he would have done in the Lusitania incident.

It has been the president's policy to avoid any discussion of diplomatic affairs in his political speeches but the president's advisers felt that Mr. Hughes' allusion was of such a character that a reference to it should be made.

Eight special trains rolled in here today, bringin gabout 3,000 Pennsylvanians, for this was "Pennsylvania Day" at the summer White House. Seven bands filled the air with music.

President Wilson's advisers are greatly pleased over the result of his trip to Omaha and Indianapolis. They believe that all uncertainty as to the trend in Indiana and Nebraska is now over.

The president has received reports from the middle west and has expressed himself as gratified over the situation there. Reports just in from Ohio say that the outlook there is good and supporters of the president believe that his speech in Cincinnati on October 26, will clinch the situation in his favor.

Next Thursday, President Wilson will speak in Chicago, and he plans to "cut loose" in that address to riddle arguments advanced by Mr. Hughes.

SUIT IS SETTLED.

The case of Iva Herring against T. F. Leviness and others, for money in the sum of $275, and foreclosure of mortgage on real and personal property, was settled between the parties and dismissed in court.

Democrats Want Former Governor to Aid in Local Rally.

COX IS COMING SOON

Joseph McGhee, Candidate for Attorney General, Scheduled.

By David W. Bowman.

Wednesday evening has been set aside by the Young Men's Wilson-Cox club for the first extension of the organization to outlying precincts, and a string of automobiles will carry a delegation to Delphos on that evening, the trip being free to all members and others who care to go. Plans for the organization, as well as for completing the registration, will be discussed this evening at the headquarters of the executive committee, Morris arcade, at 7:30 sharp. The committee chairmen, officers and ward and precinct captains are expected to be on hand.

Former Governor James M. Cox will speak in Lima shortly before the closing of the campaign, it was announced this morning. Senator Pomerene is also expected, and Joseph McGhee, candidate for attorney general, is also scheduled for a two-day canvas of the county.

Judson Harmon, whose popularity has increased rather than declined since he left the gubernatorial chair, may bo in Lima one evening during the second week before the election. In case he consents to speak here Lima democrats expect the largest rally the party has staged in recent years, as the former governor is very popular with the railroad boys, practically all of whom are democratic this year, on the head of the ticket at least. As far as drawing cards go, the appearance of the veteran Cincinnati jurist may be counted upon as able to fill any house in Ohio, despite the lingering animosity of a few of the mere politicians.

Officers of the Young Men's Wilson-Cox club have received their implements of war from the national committee, and work is to begin Monday at the regular meeting scheduled for 7:30. Their first duty will be to complete registration as far as possible, the two remaining days offering a final chance to swell the total possible vote to more than 9,000. Little more than half of that is already entered, but the heavier democratic precincts and those containing a large labor vote which the democrats expect this year are well represented. The registration is said to be heavier than ordinarily, compared with the first two days of past years.

BAYONNE POLICE, GUNS DRAWN, READY TO MEET STRIKERS' CHARGE.

This remarkable photograph of the police of Bayonne, N. J., in action with drawn revolvers, awaiting the charge of strikers in the Standard Oil plant, was taken at considerable risk to the photographer. Neither the police nor the strikers wanted the photographers there and several were ill treated. But this photographer caught the police with pistols in hand. Note the bluecoat at the right in the background with a rifle drawn aiming at the striker. Every other bluecoat in the party either has his pistol ready or is taking it from his pocket.

CIVIL WAR IS FLAMING AT BAYONNE WHERE DAWN SEES BATTLES

Woman Dies Of Fright When Officers Search House For Weapons

RIOT GUNS ARE USED

Strikers' Mass Meeting This Afternoon May Result In Serious Trouble

BAYONNE, N. J., Oct. 14.—Civil warfare again flared in full blast here early today, after 12 hours of calm. At there separate points battles were fought between police and strike sympathizers. The crack of revolver and rifle shots again is the predominant noise in this strife-torn town.

Mrs. Stephen Popp, 50, died of fright when the police entered her house to search for weapons. She is the second woman to fall victim to the oil strike and is the fourth death. Mrs. Popp is the mother-in-law of Stephen Peregrin, arrested in connection with the strike. As she opened her door early today to tha police, who had formed a strong cordon about the house, a mob of a thousand rioters gathered, surrounding the officers.

The police opened a volley from their riot guns into the throng. At the first shot Mrs. Popp clutched at her heart and fell back on the floor, dead.

Grave fears are felt by the police for what may happen today at the funeral of Mrs. Sophie Karak, who was shot dead Wednesday night while watching riots from the window of her home. The strikers charge that the fatal shot was fired by a policeman. A force of 150 policemen has formed a ring around the house where the funeral is to take place. A deadline includes two houses on either side. All the male lodgers have been ordered from these houses.

Serious trouble also is looked for as a result of the strikers' mass meeting held this afternoon. The quiet that prevailed during the night has caused the belief that the meeting would end in a majority vote to resume work.

After this morning resumption of rioting this is now believed improbable.

The signal for the resumption of rioting was an attempt by the Standard Oil company to send out three oil wagons from the company's plant, relying on the assurances of the police that the situation was well in hand. Bayonne firemen dressed in police uniforms guarded the wagons.

A mob of a thousand strikers threw itself in the path of the wagons. The firemen shot over the rioters' heads without result. Then they aimed lower and shot to kill. The rioters cut the harnesses of the first wagon, the animals dashing in a wild gallop up the street leaving the vehicle stranded. More than 200 shots were exchanged before the strikers finally were dispersed.

DIPLOMATIC CRISIS AGAIN IMMINENT IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Report That Germans Have Naval Base in U. S. is Being Probed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Complications between the United States and the entente powers will come to a head within the next week. Already the joint refusal of Great Britain and France to accept the American construction of international law as applied to mail is before the state department. The reply to the demand that the British black list be abolished is en route from London. It in effect states that this action is of no concern to the United States as it is a legitimate measure of defense.

The next six weeks promise to be most critical in the history of the United States. Although the danger of complications over German submarine operations on this side of the Atlantic overshadow the mail and trade conditions, which deal entirely with dollars and cents, it is accepted that any drastic action by the administration will not be taken until after it considers them fully.

In connection with the submarine situation reports have reached several government departments that the operations of the U-53 were not the first on this side of the ocean. Certain vessels, on "admiralty service," playing between Canadian ports and Great Britain with supplies are said to have been chasen by submarines within ten days and at least one is reported to have been sunk. These reports naturally are impossible of confirmation here because of the fact that the British naval officials in Canada maintain their censorship. It is admitted, however, that British warships and destroyers have been searching for more than a month along the bleak and uninhabited coast of Labrador and at other points off the Canadian coast for a German submarine base similar to those discovered off the coast of Scotland early in the war.

This base or bases, according to reports, was established from the United States. And while the British and American fleets continue to make independent search of their own coast lines for submarine bases officials here say that even though they are located within the United States there is no law which provides any drastic punishment for their establishment on American soil. Any prosecutions that might take place, it is said, would be limited to such narrow lines that those responsible would have a good chance of escaping punishment on technicalities. It is expected that, as a result of this discovery, comprehensive laws covering every phase of such a situation will be asked by President Wilson of congress when it re-convenes in December. Up to the present all of the

PAY ROLL BANDITS ESCAPE WITH $3.800

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Three payroll bandits" committed a daring daylight holdup in Wabash avenue shortly before noon today and escaped with a bag containing $3,800. The three men met E. J. Lipsch, purchasing agent for a printing concern, on his return from the bank, grabbed the bag containing the money and escaped in a limousine. Hundreds of persons were passing at the time.

EXCLUSIVE COLORED SALOON IS GRANTED

CANTON, O., Oct. 14.—The Stark county liquor licensing board today established a precedent when they gave V. S. Cooke, colored, permission to run a saloon providing he employs colored bartenders and serve colored trade only.

The reason for these provisions was because most Canton saloonists refuse to serve colored trade.

HOSPITAL OFFICERS WILL AID COUNCIL IN INVESTIGATION

New Building May be Result of Attention Called to Institution.

Trustees and officials of the City hospital welcome the proposed investigation of the affairs of the institution next Monday night at the regular meeting of the city council.

It is the belief of those directly connected with affairs of the institution that the inquiry will be a benefit in a number of ways. The principal one is the construction of a new building to take the place of the old building which is now inadequate in size.

It is pointed out by physicians that the present building is not up to the standard and that it could not be bettered by the addition of wings as already too many wings have been constructed on the original building which comprised the hospital. It is deemed advisable to construct an entirely new building by local physicians.

Another change that is advocated by local phyicians is to name a house physician and place him in charge of affairs at the institution. This would eliminate the necessity of long waits in case of urgent operations. Many times the local doctors, who give three months of their time to waiting on patients at the hospital, are located when badly needed.

Trustees of the institution claim that the council will be assisted in every way possible in the investigation of affairs of the hospital. Councilmen will be shown just where the $6,000 is spent, donated by the city to assist in maintaining the institution, according to trustees.

JOHN M. PARKER IS URGING RE-ELECTION OF THE PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—John M. Parker, progressive candidate for vice president, in a speech at the Biltmore hotel, this afternoon, took a bitter fling at Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and urged the re-election of President Wilson.

The reception, at which the speech was made, was a notification meeting, as Mr. Parker had never been officially informed of his nomination. Progressives were present from different parts of the country.

Mr. Parker said he did not seek the nomination, adding:

"I do not in the slightest degree regret my action, and infinitely prefer to have been one of those who were duped by over-confidence rather than being put in the position of violating a sacred trust and again work arm in arm with men bitterly denounced in 1912 as guilty of most of the political crimes on the calendar and as men who were a menace to the future welfare of America.

"True progressives have lived up to their slogan 'Pass prosperity around,' and as an earnest, ardent progressive I offer another slogan for 1916—'Leave well enough alone.' Feeling as I do, in every state where we have a ticket, I urge every progressive to step up like a man and vote it, and in those states where we have been betrayed by former leaders and by those who weakly carry out their future, to vote their honest convictions and support Woodrow Wilson for president of the United States."

unanimous, according to persons who were present.

During the course of a sketch a comedian and a soubrette began to argue politics. The presidential election was their theme.

"Let's leave it to a vote of the house," suggested the comedian.

The soubrette agreed, and her partner advanced to the edge of the stage.

"All those who favor the election of Hughes please signify by making a loud noise," he requested.

Deep silence You could almost hear a gumdrop.

"All those who favor the election of Wilson will so signify."

A yell arose which would drown out the whistle of a trans-Atlantic liner.

If there is any meaning in signs, Lima, at least, is strong for Woodrow.

In reporting the eighteenth annual reunion of the Second O. V. I., Spanish-American war veterans, The Findlay Courier comments as follows:

> Kent W. Hughes, who responded today to the address of welcome, is the democratic nominee for judge of the court of appeals for the short term. He hails from Lima, and the large vote he received at the August primary tells the story of his great popularity in this neck of the political woods.
> Mr. Hughes is a good lawyer and he will make an upright splendid judge, and a perfectly fit co-adjutor of Judge Kinder and Judge Crow. That he will be elected goes without saying, for the district is safely democratic. He is a favorite with the Spanish war boys and they very much appreciate his presence here today at the eighth reunion.
> When Mr. Hughes became a candidate for the court of appeals bench he bought himself a Ford and in that trusty and handy machine he visited every nook and corner of this big district. He was at all the cross roads meetings as well as those in the country school houses. Thoroughly democratic in his tastes, he was at home anywhere and everywhere. The people like his quiet and unostentatious ways and his courteous manners and the more they see of him the better they like him.

The preliminary hearing on the mandamus requested by Charles E. Wharton of Kenton, who seeks to have the court force Joseph M. Madigan, chief deputy, and the board of deputy state supervisors of Allen county put his name on the ballot, opened this morning before Judge John P. Bailey of the Putnam county court of common pleas, at the court house. Through his attorney, Ed Blank, the Kenton man seeks to get an order commanding the election board officials in this and the other fifteen counties in the Third judicial district to enter his second set of petitions as a candidate for judge of the court of appeals, as the opponent of Judge Phil M Crow of Kenton, on the rotating non-partisan judicial ticket

Madigan is represented by James J Weadock, Prosecuting Attorney Ortha O. Barr, and assistant Harry O'Connor. The only phase heard by Judge Bailey this morning concerns the necessity of the mandamus asked by Wharton, and in case it is decided that the judicial aspirant has any grounds for asking a writ of mandamus the evidence will be introduced Monday. A decision may be expected Monday noon.

No, Francis Bartlett Willis isn't omnipotent in Ada, although the raw-raw boys and the numerous appointees would lend one so to believe. But this morning's Cincinnati Enquirer carries a dispatch from the scholastic environs of that village, telling of the flopping of one more republican to the standard of Woodrow Wilson. And it's none other than the revered "Prexy" Lehr, president meritus and founder of the institution. The Enquirer's story reads as follows

> ADA, O., Oct. 13.—It was reported here today that President Emeritus H S Lehr, of Ohio Northern university, here, who has been a staunch republican nearly all his life, will vote for President Woodrow Wilson this year The president's peaceful policy has won him it is said.

DAN HANNA FAILS TO CONTEST WIFE'S SUIT FOR DIVORCE

RAVENNA, O., Oct. 14.—Dan R Hanna, millionaire ship owner and publisher, and son of the late Mark Hanna, failed to contest his third divorce case here today. Mrs. Hanna, whom he married in 1906, alleged unfaithfulness and testified that he had admitted having affairs with other women. She asked custody of the three children.

Only two other witnesses were heard, George Horne, manager of the Hanna farm here, and Rev. John Gardner, a character witness for Mrs. Hanna. Most of the testimony was by deposition.

Shortly before noon Judge Robinson handed down his decision, giving Mrs. Hanna absolute divorce and custody of the children, Ruth, 8, Charlotte 5, and Mary, 3.

No alimony was asked as Hanna had deeded his 2,000 acre model farm near here to his wife some time ago and is understood to have made a financial settlement on her. Hanna was represented by former Federal Judge W. R. Day, who, however, took no part in the proceedings. James H. Hoyt, and H. H. McKeehan of Cleveland represented Mrs Hanna

Horne testified to filling out a check for Hanna to use at a New York resort. The amount was not brought out in the hearing.

TALKS ON THRIFT

The Turkey That Would Build House

There is a negro story of a turkey who, every time it snowed, drew his feathers about him and firmly resolved to build him a house. But before he could decide where to build, or what kind of a house, the sun came out and he would shake out his feathers, strut around and say to himself: "Nobody wants to be in a house on a day like this," and the result was he froze to death one winter night.

There are a lot of people in the some frame of mind as the turkey. When things are going wrong, work is slack, times are hard, sickness or accident comes and their money is gone, they firmly resolve that in the future they will take care of their money and look out for the rainy day; build them a house, as it were; but as soon as things right themselves, they forget their good resolution and the next time of need finds them as ill-prepared as ever.

Most of us are merely grown up children. We want what we want when we want it We live day by day. Tomorrow is a vague uncertainty to us. The boy will gorge himself with green apples in June and forget that there is a physical law against eating green apples Tomorrow he will find it out, and may resolve not to eat green apples again; but a good resolution never gets a man anywhere unless he keeps it. Many a New Year's promise is made only to be broken and pledges are signed only to be forgotten. How many a man has resolved to stop drinking when drinking has brought him in court! He should have stopped before.

Thousands of men have firmly resolved that they would start a savings bank account, made a deposit or two, and then quit. An examination of the books of any savings bank will show large numbers of accounts with but one deposit. It is mute evidence of a good resolution broken. A certain father with two children had them insured in an industrial insurance company. He concluded that he could save the money he was paying for insurance some other way and decided to put it in a savings bank, and proceeded to open an account for each child. The first was the last deposit ever made. The insurance collecter quit his visits and the father's good resolution to save for his children stopped with his coming, and today they are without either bank account or insurance.

The rainy day comes to every man No matter how long it may be delayed or how distant it may seem, or how bright the sky today, trouble is bound to come to us all, some time A certain young man, full of energy and ambition, with as bright prospects as a man ever had and highly successful, made the boast that he never expected his income to be less than it was at that time; but inside of three years it was nothing. He thought he had a life job, and it had every indication of being such, but the props went from under, and at forty he had to begin building all over again. He does not boast now

The turkey in the story was no more foolish than a lot of human beings. The difference lies in the fact that the turkey takes what is given him, or what he can find. We have the power to choose. We are in a large measure masters of our own fate. The beaver and the ant have the right idea; they build their houses, fair weather or foul, knowing that having a house you can go into it when it rains or stay out of doors when it don't, as you like. You are safe either way.

A VALUABLE TOOTH.

There is an amusing story of the economy necessary in the early days of the Norwegian theatre at Bergen. It was in 1849, when Ibsen and Bjornson were creating the national drama. A lady had been engaged for the port of "second old woman" when it was discovered that her elocutionary powers were impaired by the fact that she had lost one of her front teeth. Impoverished as she was, the management came to the rescue and bore the expense of the necessary dentistry. When she retired, however, after two seasons, she had to leave the tooth behind her, the example of the dentist's art being the property of the theatre The management was too poor to part with it.

WHAT NOTHING IS.

If any man thinks that he can conceive well enough how there should be nothing, I will engage that what he means by nothing is as much something as anything that he ever thought of in his life, and I believe that if he knew what nothing was it would be intuitively evident to him that it could not be. Absolutely nothing is the aggregate of all the contradictions in the world Jonathan Edwards reports from the naval officers who are conducting the search for the rumored submarine base on American soil indicate that none has been discovered. If German submarines have been supplied off the American coast, officials say they were probably taken care of by privately-owned yachts against whose owners no evidence is possible. And so far as the U-53 and U-61 are concerned officials here believe that they now are well on their way back to their home base.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 14.—United States aeroplanes are to be used in patrol duty along the coast and in the search of any secret submarine base the Germans may have established on the coast.

The aviation ship North Carolina arrived here today with full equipment of flying machines and will co-operate with the fleet of destroyers that has been steaming up and down the coast looking for "U" boat victims or for neutrality violations.

High winds prevented any flying today. The North Carolina will go to New London tomorrow.

AERIAL TRUCK TESTED.

The aerial truck of the Central fire department, was put in use this morning, when Fire Chief Mack called it to the court house. A rope which is fastened to a flag pole, located on the grounds, was the cause of its being put in effect. The hoisting ladders of the big truck have been put in use quite frequently here of late. A large crowd congregated at the scene.

FRUCHEY FUNERAL.

Funeral services for Calvin Fruchey, 70 years old, were held this afternoon at two o'clock at the Church of Christ in Beaverdam. Interment was in the cemetery near there. He was for many years engaged in a meat market in that place, but had retired with ill health. He was a Civil war veteran and member of the Eighty-eighth regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

THE MOST UNKINDEST CUT.

The truest and most devoted friend that man ever had is the little inanimate bundle of nerves that stands guard by his bedside through the dead hours of the nights, its palpitating little heart spreading cheer and confidence over the surrounding gloom. Yet man often forgets the debt of gratitude he owes this faithful and tireless little friend for the sleepless, watchful hours it subjects itself to in order that he may slumber in security and comfort, and when it sings its merry morning lay I have seen him, instead of bestowing fond caresses, reach from his warm quilts, grasp it ruthlessly and slam it into the farthest and darkest corner of the room, crushing the dainty hands that seemed uplifted in an attitude of horror and protection and unworthy reproaches at these. "Damn that blinkety-blank alarm clock anyhow!" then return to his snorin —Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

DUTY OF DEMOCRATS.

"What it is our imperative duty to do, my fellow-citizens, is to make everybody we know understand what the Democratic Party stands for and what it intends to do."—From Woodrow Wilson's speech at Shadow Lawn, Sept. 30, 1916.

"I want to give you a greeting and a message from the President of the United States. * * * He authorizes me to say for him that were he here he would express his especial appreciation of the unswerving loyalty, the steady support and assistance he has received from Senator Pomerene." — Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, June 1, 1916.

WAR UNDER HUGHES OR PEACE UNDER WILSON?

(From President Woodrow Wilson's address to the Young Men's Democratic League, Sept. 30, 1916).

There is only one choice as against peace and that is war. Some of the supporters of that party (Republican), a very great body of the supporters of that party, openly declare that they want war, so that the certain prospect of the success of the Republican party is that we shall be drawn in one form or another into the embroilments of the European war, and that to the south of us the force of the United States will be used to produce in Mexico the kind of law and order which some American investors in Mexico consider most to their advantage.

BREADTH OF VISION

If Woodrow Wilson and Just-Ice Charles Evasive Hughes had been members of the continental congress; and the former had been elected a member of the famous quintet appointed to draft the Declaration of Independence; and had been elected to the post chosen for Thomas Jefferson; and had written the document and reported it to the body; and if it had been adopted unanimously and accepted by a joyful nation—Hughes would have knocked him for it.

If Woodrow Wilson and Just-Ice Charles Evasive Hughes had been members of the constitutional convention of 1787, and the former had been appointed to do the work which Gouverneur Morris has so well performed, that of turning the finished instrument of government into the clearest and most fluent prose—Hughes would have knocked him for it.

If Woodrow Wilson and Just-Ice Charles Evasive Hughes had been members of the senate of the United States on that memorable January 20, 1830, the occasion of the Great Debate; and if the former had been selected by his northern compeers to reply to the vitrolic attack of Robert Hayne of South Carolina; and had delivered the same brilliant oration as that which is universally acknowledged as the finest sentiment and most polished masterpiece in all the volumes uttered by Daniel Webster—Hughes would have knocked him for it.

If Woodrow Wilson and Just-Ice Charles Evasive Hughes had been rivals for the senatorship from Illinois in 1858, and slavery had been, as it then was, the issue; and if the former had taken the attitude of Abraham Lincoln, speaking the same simple truths with the same rustic humor and forcible logic, and had asked the same "Freeport question"—Hughes would have knocked him for it.

Just-Ice Hughes has knocked more in the past three months than all the woodpeckers in the forest of Arden. He hasn't committed himself to more than two definite, direct, unequivocal policies—a suffrage amendment and the old fashioned robber tariff. Aside from that he has done nothing more than to bring sparks from the figurative anvil. He has knocked the eight-hour day law and the federal reserve bank system. He has knocked the currency measure and the rural credits act. He has knocked the preparedness program and the child labor measure and the rural credits act. He has knocked the preparedness program and the child labor measure. He has knocked President Wilson for keeping the peace without the loss of honor and for using force at Vera Cruz to preserve honor. He has knocked President Wilson for bringing Germany to time and has called him pro-British. He has knocked him for protesting and calling for remedial legislation in the case of the British blacklist and has called him pro German. And often he has just knocked away with no specific objective in view.

There is a little college in Ohio where hazing used to prevail—the bed-slat, ball-bat, two-by-four class of hazing which keeps pliant for football season the muscles of the sophomores. In the old days, when a freshman was so obedient that the sophomores couldn't find anything for which to paddle him, the freshman would be paddled for not offering a reason. That is the way with Hughes. When he can't find anything for which to knock the president he knocks him for not offering a just reason.

But you may recall that "every knock is a boost".

"WE RECALL JERRY"

The Chicago Herald must have a very thorough collection of clippings and biographies, or else the keeper of the "morgue" in that office has a memory as long as an elephant's nose. Under the caption "We Remember Jeremiah" The Herald, an independent paper, says editorially:

> Jeremiah A. O'Leary got the rebuke he deserved for his boorish insult to the president of the United States. The contempt with which the nation's executive treated his insolent missive was entirely appropriate.
> Chicago knows Jeremiah. Chicago remembers Jeremiah on the stage of the auditorium. Chicago has not forgotten the atmosphere of that meeting, nor the almost treasonable utterance of the president of a "truth" society; of the shouted suggestions at that gathering that William Jennings Bryan, then secretary of state, ought to be hanged.
> But not content with a passionate, unreasoning abuse of this government O'Leary sought shamelessly to cower the chief executive of the land into doing the bidding of an alien government. With base forgetfulness of the dignity due the first representative of a nation of free men and women, this fellow actually threatened to mobilize those false Americans whose loyalty is not to America into a voting army, pledged to war on the president.
> Such infamy is best punished in the manner President Wilson chose. His calm defiance of O'Leary's communication was in the finest American spirit. His words, "I would feel deeply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me," were a blow straight from the shoulder. And the challenge, "Since you have access to many disloyal Americans and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them." George Washington's handling of the Tories of 1776 was hardly better.
> News dispatches from Shadow Lawn indicate that the president would like to have used more vigorous language. We might wish that he had done so did not the message he sent express the feelings of all loyal Americasn, regardless of party, with such skillful mastery.

Editor Keeley's remarks should be convincing.

What ever became of the old fashioned voter who fell for the bun comb about the tariff protecting laboring men? His son now believes that the cripples and blind men just out of a war can flood the country with merchandise.

M. T. Herrick's expense account in the primary battle teaches many lessons, but none more forcibly than the real meaning of M. T.'s initials—Money Talks.

GOOD EVENING: Now for football.

The President's Column

First Duty of a Nation.

There have been some among us who have not thought first of America, who have sought use the might of America in some matter not of America's origination, and have forgotten that the first duty of a nation is to express its own individual principles in the action of the family of nations and not to seek to aid and abet any rival or contrary ideal.—To D. A. R., Washington, October 11, 1915.

Militarism Un-American.

There is no danger of militarism if you are genuine Americans, and I for one do not doubt that you are. When you begin to have the militaristic spirit—not the military spirit, that is all right—then begin to doubt whether you are Americans.—West Point address, June 13, 1916.

Concentration of Power.

When we resist, therefore—when I, as a democrat, resist—the concentration of power, I am resisting the processes of death, because concentration of power is what always proceeds the destruction of human initiative and therefore of human energy—Workingmen's Dinner, New York, September 4, 1912.

National Honor.

I like that explanation of Henry V. in that stirring play of Shakespeare, "If it be an offense to covet honor, then I am the most offending soul alive," and I believe that could be said of America. If it be an of[illegible] of nations to covet honor then is America the most offending nation in the world. But she knows the basis of honor, that the basis of honor is right, is peaceful intention, is just action, is the treatment of others as we would wish to be treated ourselves, is the insistence upon the rule of a free field and no favor.—At Topeka, February 2, 1916.

Religious Antagonisms.

I have been deeply disturbed, gentlemen, I think every thoughtful American has been disturbed, at the evidence afforded in recent days of the recrudescence of religious antakonisms in this country. That is a very dangerous thing which cuts at the very root of American spirit. —To New York Federation of Churches, January 27, 1916.

EPIGRAMS.

The poor are in the majority, the rich in the minority, and whenever I can I would put government in the hands of poor men.

Jefferson's Declaration of Independence is a practical docufent for the use of practical men.

That war (Spanish-American) has drawn the veil from the eyes of America, and America has looked around and found herself among the peoples of the world.

PUBLIC FORUM

NOT IN A "HEROIC MOOD."

To the Editor of The Times-Democrat:

Sometime prior to the meeting of the late republican convention Col. Roosevelt issued a "manifesto" announcing that if the country was not in a "heroic mood" he did not desire the nomination for president. Mr. Roosevelt was not always so heroic.

It will be recalled by the general reader of history that the legislature of California, ten years ago, passed a bill prohibiting Japanese immigrants from acquiring real estate exceeding a value limited by law. Against this restriction Japan protested and the Japanese ambassador demanded that the governor of California veto the act. Theodore Roosevelt—he of Oyster Bay and the "heroic mood"—was then president of the United States. It will also be recalled by well-informed students of the history of that time that the Japanese ambassador was authorized by his government to represent to the United States that if the legislature of California did not recede or if the bill was signed by the governor, Japan would consider it a solemn duty to declare war against the United States. Teddy got busy. By telegraph he advised the California executive to delay approval of the anti-Japanese bill until a letter from Washington could reach him. The governor was in a "heroic mood" and argued that California was a sovereign state; that the right to legislate against permitting Japanese to acquire and hold a limited amount of real estate was not an infringement of the national or state constitutions. President Roosevelt was greatly alarmed, and sent as pecial representative to Sacramento to plead with the governor to veto the bill. The governor did so under protest issuing a statement, explaining his attitude on the question. President Roosevel was "coerced," "forced" by a threat to yield to the Mikado's demand, and in cowardly fashion intervened in the domestic affairs of a sovereign state. The "heroic mood" was absent.

Mr. Roosevelt is now very eager to go to war with some nation—Germany or Mexico—to gratify the professional patriots of Wall Street. In the presence of a real peril the colonel's heroism is not conspicuous. The Falstaffian statesman is valorous when no danger impends.

N. C. A. RAYHOUSER.

TAFT ON THE 8-HOUR LAW.

Editor Times-Democrat:

Ex-President Taft says the president "yielded to force when he signed the eight-hour railroad bill." The railroad men made no demand upon the president. But does Mr. Taft consider the suffering the defeat of the bill would have caused?

FREETOWN.

The British Province of Sierra Leone, on the western shoulder of Africa, is typical of the modern tropical world—of its wealth, its beauty, its imaginative appeal, and of the spectre of plague that hangs above it.

Freetown is the capital of Sierra Lone. It is a beautiful town of low white houses set in wide grounds, above a perfect land locked harbor. Behind it the tropical mountains rise in great cumulous forested terraces to a height of over 2,000 feet, forming vaguely the semblance of a great couchant lion. It is from this fancy that the land derives its name, and the figure is rendered more appropriate by the rumbling voice of the tropical storms which frequently gather about these heights.

In these mountains, extending far beyond the reach of transportation, are great forests of oil palms, and the chief industry of the place is the gathering of this wild harvest and expressing the oil by primitive means. The prices are high; for the demand is constant. The crop seems inexhaustible. It will be many years before any considerable part of the great palm forests are exploited; for Sierra Leone is under the curse that protects most tropical countries from the white man. In the mangrove swamps of its littoral, breed the mosquitoes that carry malaria and yellow fever. Sierra Leone was long known as "the white man's grave." Nothing will ever free it of this curse of plague except an unceasing struggle with the best of scientific methods, such as we have waged at Panama. This work will undoubtedly be done within the next century. The conquest of the tropics is assured, but at an immense expense of life and treasure.

ALWAYS LEAP YEAR FOR BLOND ESQUIMO GIRLS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Trial marriages are quite the thing in the far north, according to George H. Wilkin of London, member of the Canadian government Arctic expedition, who has reached Chicago laden with films and trophies of all sorts from the little known land about Coronation gulf.

"The Blond Eskimos, as they are called, are very interesting people," he says. "They have no regular marriage ceremony, polygamy is prevalent and trial marriages everywhere are recognized as legitimate.

"The girls are a bit chunky for our ideals, but by no means without fascination. Once one grows accustomed to their physical type he learns to admire them, particularly for their kindnes sand loyalty. Most of the girls get married between the ages of 15 and 16. They pick a man they want and if he does not ask them, they ask him to marry. If there is trouble she returns to her parents, or she need not do so.

"The man may take a second wife, or several if he wishes, and all the women live together in harmony. One woman I knew had two husbands. She always managed to keep one out fishing most of the time, and she didn't seem to care which one."

GERMAN CITIES GET MILK CHEAP FROM SWITZERLAND

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Many of the Southern German cities are making efforts to secure a permanent supply of milk from Switzerland. The Swiss government has consented to permit the export of fresh and condensed milk in spite of the objections of the allies, but other difficulties have to be overcome. The wholesale dealers and farmers' organizations demand that large sums be deposited in Swiss banks to insure the payment of their bills.

These deposits have to be gold and the government hesitates to give up any of the previous metal deposited in the vaults of the Reichsbank. So far only three cities in Baden and two in Wuertenberg have succeeded in obtaining the gold for the deposits required. The five towns are now sure of a sufficient supply of milk at 5½ cents a qaurt.

FINDLAY—The Continental Sugar company will open its plant in this city within the next few days. The crop of sugar beets will be a good one, and they are said to contain a larger percentage of sugar than ever before. It is understood here that the company has contracted for half of its output at $6.10 per hundred.

INVENTS NEW WEAPON ON SPUR OF MOMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—For a remarkable bombing feat, Lance Corporal A. English of the Northumberland Fusiliers, has een awarded the Distinguished Conduct medal. When the Germans exploded a mine he threw 103 bombs at them from an exposed position. He also invented a new projectile on the spur of the moment. He threw six full boxes of bombs at the enemy, first taking the pin out of one of the bombs. The explosion of the one bomb would blow the box to pieces and scatter the other bombs, which would explode a few seconds later. This feat gained the mine crater for the British.

WIDOWED AS SHE WARRED AND WON FORTUNE ABROAD

KATHRYN STANTON.

NEW YORK—At her home in Whitestone, L. I., Mrs. Kathryn Stanton today is slowly recovering from the shock she received on rushing ashore from the Tuscania to embrace her husband and describe her triumphs in selling her centrifugal gun to the British war office, only to be told that she was a widow and that her husband, Frank McMillan Stanton, a noted copper mining man and a descendant of Peter Stuyvesant, the Dutch governor, had died Saturday. The widow fainted when her sister garbed in mourning broke the news to her at the pier. Stanton appeared to be rallying on the way to health when his wife sailed to sell the gun to the British. He had doubts about the success of her mission.

PITTSBURGH PLANS FOR MILK SUPPLY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 14.—Believing that a milk strike on Monday morning is inevitable, Pittsburgh dealers today were endeavoring to make arrangements to secure a supply from other sources than the Northern Ohio Milk Producers' Association which furnishes about 85 per cent of the milk used in the city. The dealers are negotiating with Ohio producers not allied with the Dairymen's Association and with various western Pennsylvania dairymen. The latter, however, are expected to follow the course taken by the Ohio Association and refuse shipment unless given the same raise demanded by the Ohio milkmen. Agents of the Pittsburgh dealers are now in northern Illinois making arrangements for the shipment of milk here if it becomes necessary. The dealers admit that with the freight it would be necessary to sell the milk here at a loss but they are willing to do this as a strike measure.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The milk strike came to an end today. The farmers and small dairymen who were fighting with them have won. The four big distributing companies in Greater New York have agreed to give the farmers a substantial increase over the former price.

The strike, which started about 11 days ago, caused great hardship in New York where the milk and cream supply was cut in half. The farmers and dairymen lost a total of about $500,000 by refusing to bring their product into the city. The four distributing companies who deliver half of the milk consumed in New York lost an equal amount. The tieup ended shortly after midnight when the distributing concerns agreed to grant the increase and also to the naming of a permanent committee to determine in future all prices for milk as regards farmers, dairymen and distributors. Two members of the committee will be two farmers and two dealers. The fifth will be chosen by the four.

ALLIANCE SUFFERS $40,000 FIRE LOSS

ALLIANCE, O., Oct. 14.—Fire, originating in a restaurant early today gutted three three-story frame buildings on East Main street and damaged two others, causing a loss of probably $40,000. The buildings are practically a total loss. They are the London restaurant, J. P. Miller's cafe and apartments; Sherman Schlagel cafe and apartments, the Parthe block and the Doner-Pyle Dry Goods company.

More than a score of sleeping tenants were routed in time to escape in their night clothes, firemen assisting in taking them from their rooms. The burned buildings must be replaced by fireproof structures as the new fire ordinance forbids the erection of such structures as were destroyed.

The Searchlight

A MOVIE ON WHEELS.

The latest moving picture development is the well-equipped theatre train recently put into operation in western Illinois. This train has its own electric light plant providing perfect lighting, even in small towns where no local electricity is available. Plenty of fans and a complete ventilating system make the cars comfortable even on a hot night. They will be equally warm in the winter. An electrically operated phonograph supplies music. It is intended that this train carrying first-class plays shall pass from one town to another and give a better production that can be offered by any permanent theatre in a small place. The train will go to the prairie states and make small towns for the benefit of the farmers and their families.

Stolzenbach's School Days Series
Advice to Children:
"LOVE YOUR SCHOOL TEACHER!"
It has been said if children correctly understood what their teachers in the schools MEANT that they would THINK when a teacher passed by:
"THERE GOES AN ANGEL!"
Because the good teacher means so very much to a child—moulding the after-life and so greatly influencing the future ability of the boy or girl. When you remember the nerve-racking trials of the average public school instructor, the self-denial of standing at work even through days of illness; the patience with which they view the shortcomings of many a boy or girl, you do not wonder that sensible little folks really love "teacher" and often regard her as an angel in disguise. Children frequently do not think about these things.
It is so with selecting and appreciating bread.
Butter-Nut Bread
Impart QUICK Energy to the Mind of a Child, rekindling and renewing the power to study, think and absorb. Bread that does not contain the same high-grade food materials cannot do this. Swearing at Your Wife Is Bad, But a Silent Grouch Is Worse

Dorothy Dix Tells of the Husband or Wife Who, When Angry, Shuts Up Like an Oyster and Torments the Whole Household by a Glum, Martyr-Like Silence That is More Hateful Than Words.

By Dorothy Dix.

A MAN WHO was guilty of using abusive language to his wife has been sentenced by Magistrate Miller of the Long island City police court not to speak to his wife for six months.

A Daniel! A second Daniel come to judgment! Thus is the punishment made to fit the crime of wife beating, for the chief indoor amusement of many a husband is saying the things to the defenseless woman who is married to him that he would not dare to say to a man even half his own size.

But There Are Some Silences That Are More Eloquent of Hatred Than Words.

Would that there were some way to extend this luminous legal decision to all the bullies and naggers and viragoes, male and female, who make the holy estate of torment with their tongues. Would that they might be enjoined from speaking at all unless they speak pleasantly! What a place of peace and rest would home, sweet home, be if buttressed up with a few legal gags!

But there are silences and silences. There is the silence that refrains from speech, and there is the silence that says things more loudly than a megaphone. There are silences more profane than any cursing could be.

All of us have witnessed the silent pledging of hatred between two people that meant a duel to the death, and each of us has withered up under a criticism of our faults and frailties that was all the more blighting because no word was said.

Silence may be the first aid toward making matrimony an earthly paradise, but, used in the home, it can also make Reno seem a city of the blessed, for it can become a brutal and effective weapon in the hands of the domestic tyrant.

Who has not known some household in which the husband and father kept his trembling family in order by means of the great silent grouch? Some days he will come home for dinner, or down to breakfast, with a face as grim and unsmiling as death. Something is wrong. He eats and drinks in silence, refusing even to ask for what he wants. He reads his paper with portentous dumbness that strikes terror into his wife's bosom.

The Silent Grouch is Always Proud That He Never Says Anything in Anger.

Finally some one screws up courage enough to ask what is the matter. Is he ill? Has anything gone wrong? Has the wife done anything to offend him? Have the children? To al queries he responds "nothing," in a tone of voice that indicates the universe is out of gear, and that arraigns everybody in the house, from the baby up, to having criminally conspired against his happiness and peace and comfort.

Such a man always takes great credit for never saying anything when he is made, but he would be less brutal if he smashed the furniture and swore a blue streak. A wife can deal with a red-hot angry man who says things and gives her a chance to talk back and explain, but with a dumb one she is utterly helpless. She can't argue with silence. She can only grit her teeth and endure what she knows to be an injustice and an outrage.

Or perhaps it is a woman who uses that awful silence to club her husband into submission. He tells her that he can't afford some extravagance on which she has set her heart. She doesn't argue or protest, or weep a few tears over it, after the normal manner of women, and then kiss and make up, and be pleasant again. Oh, no! she merely passes into a state of frozen silence that makes the North Pole seem warm and companionable by contrast.

She doesn't utter a word of reproach. Oh dear, no. She merely goes about with a sweet sad smile on her face, and the air of an early Christian martyr. She doesn't take any interest in anything. She doesn't want to do anything or go anywhere. You couldn't inveigle her into a conversation to save your life. She only says "yes," or "no," when directly addressed, and then takes refuge in speechlessness.

She sends the temperature of the house down to the freezing point. She fills it with an atmosphere of gloom and melancholy so thick that you could cut it with a knife, and she keeps things this way until her husband takes to drink or gives in to her.

Ignoring the Silent Grouch is Easier to Speak of Than to Do.

And she thinks she's been a perfect lady because she hasn't uttered any of the mean, hateful, selfish things that she was thinking. Yet any husband on earth would a million times rather have dealt with a spit-fire wife who would have blazed up in a passion of disappointment and wrath, and fought the matter out in five minutes, and then let it rest.

It's nonsense to say that those who are unfortunate enough to have to live in the same house with silent grouchers should not notice their glum moods. As well might you say that you should not get wet when you go out in the rain, or that you should not catch malaria when you breathe the fetid air of a swamp.

Such silences are a dark, damp emanation of an evil spirit that takes possession of a house and lays its blighting hand on it, chilling every joy and killing cheerfulness in every heart and the laught on every lip. You can no more escape it than you can escape the raw air of a foggy morning.

"Speech is silver and silence is golden," says the old proverb. But this is not always true. Sometimes silence is lead that crushes the light and joy out of life itself, and so it is doubtful if the woman whose husband has been ordered not to speak to her for six months will not be yearning to have him swear at her rather than sit up in that awful and accusing dumbness.

Favors of Fashion

By CLARICE.

It has been said, and, at times, apparently with reason, that fashions are designed only for slender figures, leaving those who prefer more grace of fold with freedom of movement to depend mostly on the best adaptation, or rather amplification, that can be devised from unsuitable models. Today, however, this can no longer prove a difficulty, for, in addition to the picture frock, available for almost any individual expression, and making beautiful and original gowns for evening wear, there are among the newest models one or two giving just that desired grace, while still preserving a youthful simplicity of general effect, says the Monitor.

The first to be described is one of the newest and most original of these, and, to be a success, it needs the correct contour of figure, the waist allowed to be easily free while the hips are held firmly, thus maintaining the harmony of line so essential to the fashion of today, and insuring great comfort and a lissome appearance. The lines at the front and sides of this gown are fairly flat and quite simple, relieved by wide bands of embroidery in tones of bottle green, discreetly touched with tarnished gold; this would be used on a dark navy gown, either charmeuse, fine serge, or a thin make of cloth, and could be combined with charmeuse or georgette. The chief feature of the design is the graceful dropery at the back, falling from neck to hem, part of which forms the skirt drapery, though skillful manipulation gives the effect of folds draped softly in one length from neck to hem. This would be most becoming, and equally suitable for day wear, in cloth or charmeuse; or, for a semi-evening toilette, made simply of moire antique or fine net with the draperies carried out in lace. Black and white would also prove an excellent scheme for this model, the draperies lined with white crepe chiffon, and the embroidery done in black and white jet, lightened with a touch of crystal. Tete de Negre cloth, the traperies lined with lettuce green, and embroideries in this color combined with smoke blue, would also bec harming.

NEW YORK—In his will Philip Goldman requested that $250 be set aside for a banquet to be tendered his friends after his funeral

Wall Street Source Of G. O. P. Campaign Funds

The Interests Gave Nearly $2,000,000 to Elect Taft in 1908—Mark Hanna's Record as a "Fat Fryer" is Likely to be Exceeded in Present Campaign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—In 1908, Wall street was extremely anxious to bring about the election of Mr. Taft to the presidency. It felt that with him in the White House and such guiding spirits as Senator Aldrich, Senator Penrose, Senator Gallinger, Senator Smoot, Uncle Joe Cannon, Mr. Payne and Mr. Mann in charge of the two branches of congress, its interests would be entirely safe. That "the street" was right the next four years proved conclusively. It was four years of typical republican prosperity, the kind that Wall street had become accustomed to, the kind that limited itself to Wall street and Wall street's collateral interests, and let the country get along as best it could.

Wall street was therefore liberal in its contributions. Take the "House of Morgan", for instance. In the list of contributions to the Taft campaign fund, J. P. Morgan & Co. appear as having given $150,000, a rather tidy sum. But that was only part of the Morgan contribution. The House had as partners, members of the firm, George W. Perkins, Robert Bacon and E. T. Stotesbury. Mr. Perkins added to the above sum $260,000, Mr. Stotesbury raised $125,750, and Mr. Bacon dropped in $10,000. These sums, added to what the House gave directly, make a somewhat striking total of $550,750—from one firm and its associates alone

Living under the shadow of "the street" are the railroad interests. They and some of their methods had been and were being criticised, and even, in a way, supervised and regulated in certain parts of the country. Behind Mr. Taft and a republican congress they felt they could defy the growing popular movement against themselves and their operations. Hence they, too, came along to the aid of the republican national committee.

George Gould, head of a system of roads, is on record as having contributed $100,000. The venerable Chauncey Depew, who for 12 years had represented the railroads in the United States senate and for a great many more years has been at the head of the New York Central and one or two of that road's holdnigs, gave $100,000. E. H. Harriman, of extensive interests, gave in three instalments $200,000. Mr. Milburn of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, gave $5,000; Mr. Speyer of the B & O, $25,000; Mr. Stillman, director of the New York Central and two other roads, $5,000; C. S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, $50,000; D. O. Mills of the Erie, $10,000; Roswell Miller of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, $20,000; Robert Mather, president of the Rock Island, $25,000; H. McK. Twombley, director of the Erie and two others, $10,000; John Jacob Astor, $5,000, and W. Emlen Roosevelt, $5,000—a total of $560,000, just about the same amount that the "House of Morgan" contributed; or a grand total from Morgan and the railroads of $1,110,575.

Wall street bankers, as individuals, such men as Isaac N. Seligman, James Speyer and the Kountzes, contributed to the continution of republican financial policies the sum of $88,500. Standard Oil, through the late H H Rogers, gave $110,000. United States Steel through J. F. Dryden's collections of $68,500, H. C. Frick's contribution of $50,000, Mr. Carnegie's $10,000, and Norman B. Ream's $25,000, made a total of $131,000.

There is a long list of merchants, manufacturers of textiles and the like who, possibly with some thought of favorable tariff legislation, made themselves known to the political authorities at republican headquarters. John Claflin, millionaire dry goods dealer and importer, heads the list with $5,000; William Barbour, Linen Thread Co., gave $6,000; Joseph W. Gogdon, president Phoenix Silk Co, $3,000, and so on through a very long line

Two Guggenheims, with big copper interests, gave $10,000; Clarence H. Mackay gave $15,000; Richard F. Howes, director of the International Harvester Co., gave $20,000; American Can company gave $10,000; the General Electric Co., $5,000, T Coleman du Pont of the Powder Trust, $5,000; two express companies $2,500; Adolph Lewisohn, miner and banker, $10,000—all making a total of $77,500.

George von L. Meyer, afterwards secretary of the navy and ambassador, raised personally and by solicitations, $95,727; Charlemagne Towery, who became an ambassador, gave $5,000; Harry White, another ambassador, $1,000; Gifford Pinchot, who was put at the head of the forestry bureau of the government, $5,000; Frank B. Kellogg, $1,000. Robert Bacon, who gave $10,000, later became ambassador to France.

The contributions mentioned are by no means all that were admittedly secured in 1908 by the republican national committee. Those specified reach the sum of approximately $1,800,000.

As enormous as the total is, it by no means represents all that goes out from such sources. They send out large sums to republican headquarters in doubtful states, which are not account for by the national committee. Republican state committees in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, and other states, drew vast sums.

Mark Hanna had the high record in 1896 and 1900 for "frying the fat"; it is by no means certain that that record will not fall in this campaign. Wall street wants charge of the government's financial policies; it wants such direct legislation as will give it its old-time control of the vast wealth of the United States, so that it may relieve the people of the burden of undue prosperity and take that burden unto itself.

It is the republican way, it has been the republican custom for years. When democrats in the recent congress endeavored to get through a corrupt practices act to check such expenditures the republicans prevented it.

CHAUTAUQUAS ARE POPULAR IN MOST OUT-OF-WAY PLACES

Southern Towns 40 Miles From Railway Welcome Varied Programs.

Entertainers and Instructors Delighted by Receptions Given.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—The southeran chautauqua season is on. College lecturers and Tyrolean yodelers, plate jugglers and opera singers, performing lions and national politicians who have spent the past summer entertaining audiences at Lake Chautauqua are now migrating south in the wake of the ducks. For, unlike the circus, the chautauqua does not hibernate during the winter, but carries its big canvas tent and entertainers into the small southern towns. Already, the blue grass region has been invaded; by January the chautauqua will be in Florida, and later as far west as Texas.

One enterprising chautauqua manager has contracts this year for 690 small villages and towns throughout the south. Some of them are in the cotton mill districts, some are located 45 miles from a railroad, and still others are in the fastnesses of the Kentucky and Tennessee mountains. This man might well be the envy of all large capitalists and employers of union labor. His players work all hours, travel all hours and are put to all sorts of inconveniences, but he has never had a strike. He engages his company and hires his road hands in a well-furnished and comfortable office in a big eastern city. There is nothing to suggest the character of some of the manager's most profitable towns. The players do not find it out until they get there.

Last year, one of his circuit troops traveled on lumber wagons 40 and 45 miles between towns in Kentucky and Tennessee where there were no railroads. Most of the players were dependent upon their voices for a living. They sang or yodeled or lectured or read plays. As a result of this journey over rough roads, every one of them was tired out, and the damp night air had made them hoarse. A young soprano, who was one of the principal attractions caught a cold which prevented her singing for a couple of weeks. The towns they played were extremely primitive and, to some extent, lawless. In one place they were greeted with the news that only the day before six men had been shot at a religious meeting.

The manager himself was somewhat alarmed at the news of the trip as reported by his agent, and when some of the players subsequently presented themselves at his office his first impulse was to crawl under his desk. But, much to his surprise, everybody was enthusiastic over the trip and were loud in their praise of the citizens of Tennessee and Kentucky. The young soprano had forgotten her cold and only remembered how the people had applauded her, making her sing again and again. "It was just like being a pioneer and traveling by stage coach!" she exclaimed delightedly. The lecturers were still gratified at their own success, and the manager couldn't get over the way those mountain people laughed at the coon songs and jokes. The manager was amazed to find his performers delighted when he had expected bitter complaints. Most of them signed up for the next year.

The chautauqua as it is given in the south is a mixture of road show and civic club. As much depends upon the local talent and community spirit of the town as upon the players. This is the way it is managed. Every chautauqua has an advance agent, who is about the most important person connected with it. Suppose, for example, that the town of Lafayette, Kentucky, wants to have a chautauqua. The advance agent is immediately sent there. He gets in touch with the influential people of the town—the banker, the merchant and the business man—and endeavors to secure their cooperation. A local committee is formed for the purpose of securing local talent for the event, and also for disposing of enough season tickets to guarantee the chautauqua's financial success. With the help of the agent, the committee selects the tent site and pastes a great many posters on the fences and barns along the roads. Then the agent hurries on to the next town.

When the players appear the town is ready for them. People are coming in from all the surrounding farms and villages and the town is entertaining personages of state and county importance who have been persuaded to contribute their services as speakers. These small town chautauquas of the south last only three days, whereas in the larger towns they usually last seven. The first day is called Agricultural day. In the morning the tent is given over to the local committee for whatever arrangements they have made. Usually, students or government agricultural experts from the agricultural colleges talk to the farmers on scientific farming. The program for the afternoon or night is furnished by the management and generally consists of an amusing number such as the minstrels or the magician, and a lecture by one of the learned doctors on the circuit.

The second day is Educational day. A[illegible] devote to local speakers [illegible] superintendent of [illegible] teachers of the town schools hold forth on matters of local interest. Sometimes a representative of the United States bureau of education will speak on school matters in general. In the afternoon and at night perhaps the young soprano will entertain the audience and the chautauqua players will give their famous sketches. Rip van Winkle is often given and always proves popular.

Health is the motive of the third and last day of the chautauqua. The morning, as usual, is in the hands of the local committee. Physician and health experts of the town and the surrounding county talk to the people on hygiene and sanitation; sometimes the state engineers take advantage of the opportunity to explain certain necessary sanitary improvements, and one discourse on the dangers of the fly is always given. That afternoon and night, lecturers of the chautauqua circuit speak on various subjects, and they are followed by a musical number of some sort.

In many of these small southern towns the chautauqua is the big event of the people's lives. They would not miss it for anything. It is the one institution that is bringing these rural communities—many of them far from the transportation routes of civilization—in touch with the world. They hear what the people are doing in New York, in Europe and in Japan, they are told about the activities of their own American government, and they learn what other farmers in other communities are doing. And, in order that the intellectual strain may not be too sudden nor too great, the lectures are broken up by entertainment. The benefits resulting from the local part of the chautauqua, in which community spirit and co-operation are stimulated, can not be overestimated.

Few persons outside of the towns covered by the chautauqua realize how great is this typically American business of administering information in a coating of amusement. It originated in the brain of a young Methodist minister, who held the first chautauqua some 45 years ago and it has been growing ever since. At the last chautauqua convention in Chicago, there were over a thousand persons present who make a living out of the business. The leading chautauqua performer of the country is no less a personage than William Jennings Bryan, who is not only a great statesman but an expert in the acoustics of tents, and a fine goosebone weather prophet. His greatest rival is Dr. Cook, the Arctic explorer. There are so many towns on the various circuits that a good performer can travel five successive seasons without seeing the same town twice.

From the noteworthys the performers grade on down to the black faced comedians and Japanese tumblers. They all combine into an amazing confection of platitudes and eloquence, uplift and thrill and laughter which is dear beyond word to the heart of rural America. The chautauqua would bore Broadway, but it brings genuine joy and inspiration to a thousand forgotten towns. And by its works you must judge it.

WILSON DECLINES TO RECALL MILITIA OF N. Y. ON BORDER

SHADOW LAWN, LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 14.—In a letter he sent to Governor Whitman of New York, made public here today, President Wilson declares that the "emergency" which caused the national guard to be called out and sent to the Mexican border still exists and that all of the national guard troops cannot be withdrawn from the border at this time.

"The emergency which led to the call of the militia was defined in my call of June 18, the possibility of aggression from Mexico and the protection of our frontier," the letter stated.

"This emergency still unhappily exists and I am advised by the military authorities that the withdrawal of the militia at any time from the date of the original call up to and including the present, would, in all human liklihood, have been followed by fresh aggression from Mexico upon the lives and the property of the people of the United States.

"The militia have therefore been used, and are being used, to repel invasion, and are rendering service of the highest quality and most urgently needed character of their country. It would, of course, be impossible to set a date at which the release of the remaining New York units can with certainty be accomplished. I am happy, however, to believe that the condition in northern Mexico is improving and that in the near future we will be able to do even more than has been done to relieve the embarrassments under which these organized militia regiments have necessarily suffered."

Governor Whitman had written the president, urging that the remaining New York National Guard units on the border be sent home.

"[illegible] EDERSEHN"

By EARL REED SILVERS.

They sat in the swinging couch of the Country club veranda. Mildred Terrill spoke first.

"We haven't been together at a dance for five weeks," she said.

"No," he answered, "not since you cut the last waltz at the Assembly ball."

"Are you still angry about that?"

"Yes." Cliff Hillman's lips were compressed tightly.

"I didn't do it purposely." She looked at him with big, appealing eyes.

"No, it was worse than that. You just forgot me."

"Will you let me explain?"

"I don't see that there's anything you can say to better it."

"But there is."

"What?" He looked gloomily over the rolling golf links.

"I didn't know that the last dance had started. I was walking with Arthur between dances, and we went just a little too far. We couldn't hear the music where we were."

"Do you know what the waltz was that you forgot?"

"It was 'Auf Wiedersehn.'"

"Yes, our dance." He turned to her directly. "Do you remember how, when we first heard that piece, you said that we should always dance it together?"

"Yes, I remember."

"I was crazy about you that night, and 'Auf Wiedersehn' was the most wonderful dance I had ever heard. You seemed to care a lot then."

"I did." If he had seen the light in her eyes, he would have thrilled at the message it conveyed. But he was looking into the distance.

"And still, just a week later, you cut it to go walking with Arthur Hale."

"What's past is past," she continued. "Don't you want to be good friends again?"

"Of course, but it isn't much use now."

"Why?"

"Because of something I heard."

"What was it?"

"I heard this morning," he spoke slowly, "that you are engaged to Arthur Hale."

"It isn't true; I'm not engaged to any one." She looked fairly into his brooding eyes.

"I'm glad." He smiled for the first time during the conversation. "Maybe we might have 'Auf Wiedersehn' together tonight," he suggested.

She glanced at the order in her hand.

"It's the tenth dance," she said hesitatingly, "and I am to have that with Arthur."

He scowled.

"I knew it. And that was always going to be our dance."

"I'm sorry."

"I'm sorry, too." He rose as the orchestra struck up a lively fox trot. "Here comes Arthur now," he said. "This is probably his dance, too."

"Yes, it is." She hesitated. "Maybe—" she began. But before she could speak further Arthur Hale appeared on the scene.

The girl threw a glance over her shoulder as she walked away, but Cliff did not see her. He was thinking of "Auf Wiedersehn" and all that it had meant to him.

While the others were dancing, he walked to the end of the porch and seated himself in the shadows. The music died away, but he did not stir. Suddenly he heard a girl's voice. It was Mildred's.

"Do you mind," she was saying, "if I give the tenth dance away?"

"Of course I do." Arthur spoke with the self-assurance which was his most notable characteristic. "That's 'Auf Wiedersehn,' and it's mine."

"No," the girl said, "not yours. I'm sorry, but I'll have to give it away."

"What?" The man's voice rang out angrily.

"You have ten others, and I think you can very easily give one away. At any rate, I'm going to take it."

"Well, of course you can do what you want to."

"And you won't be angry?"

"Yes, I shall be."

"Well, you'll have to be then." She spoke as if she didn't care. "I'm going to give it to Clifford."

"Who?"

"To Clifford Hillman."

"Oh, so you're going back to him?" There was a sneer in his voice.

"I think you've said enough, Arthur." She spoke quietly.

"I beg your pardon." Hale accepted his defeat like a man. "I'll see if I can find him for you."

"Thank you! I'll wait here."

After he had gone, Cliff emerged from the shadows.

"Mildred!" he said.

"Oh!" She blushed deeply. "Did you hear what I said."

"Yes," he answered.

When Hale came back to tell Mildred that his search was in vain, he could not find her, for she was hidden in the shadows which bordered the golf links.

The ninth dance was just starting when she and Cliff returned to the veranda. She glanced at her card.

"This with Arthur," she said. "I must tell him."

"And the next is 'Auf Wiedersehn.'"

"Yes," she answered, "the next is our dance." She laid her hand on his arm. "Good by, dear," she whispered.

"Till we meet again," he returned.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS FROM AN OSTEOPATHIC STANDPOINT

(Editor's Note—The Times-Democrat is enabled to publish this article on infantile paralysis through the courtesy of Dr. Josephine L. Peirce, national chairman public health department, American Osteopathic association. The illustrations, which accompany it, have been made by the author, Dr. Millard.)

The Osteopathic treatment of Poliomyelitis is radically different from the medical.

The entrance of germs through the membranes of the nose and throat, allowing infection, is possibly only because of the run-down or devitalized condition of the tissues. In the majority of cases of infantile paralysis it has been found that the membranes of the throat and nose are more or less congested, and that sometimes a slight cold is noticeable. This condition, along with a little gastric disorder, makes it easy for the germs to gain entrance.

The Osteopath believes that if all tissues of the body are constantly bathed with pure blood, that is, properly oxygenated, the germs will not enter the circulation. The entrance is usually through the membranes of the air passages, as this is the only way to gain access to the system. The germs may travel by way of the membranes of the spinal cord, through the lymphatics, which is an accessory of the circulatory system, or the germs may pass by way of the alimentary tract, thus producing organic disturbance in the main organs of the body.

The removal of the tonsils is contra-indicated and absolutely tabooed by Osteopathic physicians except in very rare cases. Not more than 10 per cent of the operations for the removal of the tonsils should be performed. In the operation for the removal of tonsils at least eight arteries carrying blood directly from the heart must be severed, (four to each tonsil) and the depression left by the removal of these prominent glands allows for more ready infection by the microbes which enter the membranes of the nose and throat.

The congestion in tonsilitis may easily be reduced by a physician having the proper information regarding the anatomy of that region. An Osteopathic physician can easily reduce all congestion, clear up the membranes and restore a healthy condition in a comparatively short time.

The late Prof. Meckinkopf, the greatest bacteriologist the world has ever known, discovered that certain blood corpuscles in the healthy blood stream would immediately attack microbes and successfully destroy them. He also found that in blood stasis, or in common terms poor circulation, these fighting microbes called phagocytes coulld not cope with the situation, and the inflammation set up was the effort on the part of nature to rush more blood to the scene, hoping that these blood corpuscles might win the victory, but if the circulation was too poor the battle was too great and they lost out, thus allowing microbic domination.

As a prophylactic measure in Poliomyelitis, outside of sanitation which no one could help but believe in, after watching the successful operations against mosquitoes and germs at Panama, we find the next measure is that of keeping the children's throats free from congestion. It stands to reason that, if the air and food passing through the nose and mouth come in contact with the nasopharyngeal membranes, the tone of these tissues must be kept absolutely at par or the child is liable to infection. This can be done through manipulation, as we have suggested. A nurse or massueis may be of great assistance but for fear the child has had a fall or twist of the neck and spine, examinations should be carefully made by an Oesteopathic physician, who is in reality a spinal expert, to determine if possible whether or not any kink or lesion exists in the ligaments or segments of the spinal column.

The Osteopathic treatment in controlling the circulation is not in the way of a general massage, but it is by working upon spinal nerve centers. These nerve centers control the circulation through a set of fine nerve fibers called the vasomotors. This is best illustrated when by sudden fright we turn pale. It is the same set of nerves which forces the blood inward, the relaxation afterwards or reaction when a person goes limp and becomes flushed, illustrates the effect to the opposite set of nerves called the vasodilators.

The controlling of the flushing of the spinal cord may be accomplished through these spinal nerve centers in the neck and spinal region. As a preventive measure this is all right, proving in a number of instances the clearing up of cases of suspected poliomyelitis, as we can verify by statements made by Osteopathic physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

If the case is not seen until after the febrile state, which usually is the fourth or fifth day, and if patralysis has set in affecting one or more of the extremeties, the same idea may be applied regarding the flushing of the spinal column. The child is too sensitive for general manipulation, and specific work on nerve centers alone which will not disturb the child is absolutely the proper thing. A child cannot stand general massage for at least three or four weeks, and general massage would not apply to the specific nerve centers which alone control the circulation. Therefore, we do not believe in massage in infantile paralysis, but in specific spinal center treatment.

The restoration of muscles which have atrophied or wasted away, in any form of paralysis can best be restored, as Dr. William Osler says, by manipulation. Day by day the increase in the size of the withered limb may be noticed, as the circulation is forced to the centers flushing the spinal cord segments. This was demonstrated very plainly after the last infantile paralysis epidemic, when the Osteopaths all over the country treated a vast number of cases which otherwise would have been hopelessly paralyzed.

The strongest point however, is prophylactic measures of the prevention of a similar malady at a future date.

Much improvement can be made in sanitary conditions, but the watching of the membranes of the nose and throat is absolutely of the most vital importance. Dr. J. B. Bailey, of Philadelphia, the greatest hay fever expert the world has ever known, who has been written up in magazines and papers many times, stated last Sunday at a private convention of Osteopathic physicians in that city that the condition he found in the nose and throat was absolutely alarming in a great many instances. The congestion and closure of the passages were such that circulation was impaired to the extent of being almost blue blood, and that he did not undedstand why there were not more cases of the epidemic than had been observed. He stated that absolutely the most essential thing for the parent to do was to have the nose and throat thoroughly manipulated, so that the tonsils would be reduced to their normal size and that the circulation would clear up the membranes as rapidly as possible. After all, the circulation is everything in any disease. No tissue will heal unless the circulation is, at least, fairly good, and inflammation and infection take place only where the tissues are devitalized.

NEW RUSSIA GROWS OUT OF WAR NEEDS

PETROGRAD, Oct 14.—What surprises one most in regard to Russia is the great organizing spirit which has made itself manifest during the war, and this in spite of all the obstacles put in the way by the Russian bureaucracy. It is especially manifest when we look at the railways and roads and ambulance service.

As is well known, practically all the Russian traffic with Europe went either through Berlin or Vienna. The only waterway to Europe was through Constantinople. All these roads were, of course, closed to traffic immediately the war started.

There remained the roads through Archangel, through Finland and Sweden and Vladivostock. The first two only were available for traffic with Europe. And it is surprising to see how, almost at a moment's notice, these ways have been rebuilt, enlarged, and used.

The imports of Russia during the last two years have greatly increased, notwithstanding. Archangel is frozen for almost half the year. New branches of railways have been built, old ones improved; quite new ports have sprung up at Archangel and in Kola; the snow prairies, which had scarcely any villages at all, have become alive and flourishing.

The same remarks apply to the ambulance service. The congress of towns and zemstovs has worked miracles. There are some deficiencies, as, for instance, lack of motor ambulance cars, but this has nothing to do with the organization. Owing to these organizing energies and enormous percentage of wounded men are able to return to the front. Then, again, while infectious diseases were a scourge in all previous Russian wars, they now are almost unknown.

Russia will emerge from the war greatly changed, notwithstanding all efforts on the part of reactionary forces. The mighty organizing effort will bear fruit, as it cannot be destroyed, even by the united pressure of the whole Russian bureaucracy.

In leading circles it is already definitely decided to prolong the prohibition of the sale of vodka, and even light wines. The bill to this effect has now been under discussion of the ministry of finance, and will be introduced into the Duma. It was decided that the wine-producing districts represent the small interests to be considered, especially in view of the great benefits accruing to the country as a whole from the total abstinence from drink.

At the same time serious attention is drawn to the necessity for increasing the numbers of universities and the creation of facilities even for students of limited means in order that they may receive a university education. The scheme is a very ingenious one. There will be introduced state insurance of students. According to the Bourse Gazette every student will have to insure his life and under the policy will got sufficient money to pay for his studies and keep him during the term of his university career.

He will, after having graduated, have to repay the sum lent from any salary he may earn. When the sum is repaid his policy will be returned to him.

THE FAUROT'S PICTURES.

Patrons of the Faurot will have a full week of motion pictures at that theatre, and the announcements indicate splendid entertainment for the entire period.

Not since he was seen in the character of John Burkett Ryder in "The Lion and the Mouse," the role which won him international fame, has the eminent dramatic actor, Edmund Breese, found a part more fitted to his distinctive talents than he has in "The Weakness of Strength," the Metro production in which he is appearing at the Faurot today. The story, which was written especialy for Mr. Breese by Aaron Hoffman, is brimful of thrilling and intensely dramatic situations. It deals with a man's regeneration, after sacrificing love, honor and the regard of his fellows in the pursuit of power and wealth. The unusually strong cast in the support of Mr. Breese includes such favorite players as Ormi Hawley, Clifford Bruce and Evelyn Brent, and Metro has given the play a splendid production. Today's program also includes a new comedy, "Gravy," with Mr and Mrs. Sidney Drew at the head of the cast, and the famous "Mutt and Jeff" in a new cartoon skit, "The Spendthrifts." Last times tonight.

Edmund Breese and Ormi Hawley in "The Weakness of Strength" at the Faurot Today.

Valentine Grant, the pretty and talented actress who leaped into instant popularity with picturegoesrs by her sparkling portrayal of Nora O'Brien in "The Innocent Lie," will be seen at the Faurot on Sunday and Monday in her latest screen success, "The Daughter of MacGregor." In the Tam O'Shanter and plaids of Jean MacGregor Miss Grant is said to present an even more entrancing portrayal than she did in her first appearance on the Paramount program. Jean runs away from her Scotch home on account of a disagreement with her stern old father and finally lands in America, where her adventures are at times thrilling, but are brightened by her quick wit and sunny disposition. The Famous Players have given Miss Grant a fine production; the Scotch scenes were taken in Canada and those in the lumber camp were filmed in Florida. The cast includes Sidney Mason, Arda LaCroix, Hellen Lindreth, Edwards Davis, Daniel Pennell, not forgetting Jean's collie, "Lady." The feature is accompanied by a new Bray cartoon comedy, "Colonel Heeza Liar's Bachelor Quarters," and the latest edition of the aPthe News.

Pauline Frederick, the distinguished emotional actress whose appearances on the screen at the Faurot are always notable events, will be seen at that theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday in her latest photodramatic success, "Ashes of Embers." In this highly successful production, which was written for Miss Frederick by Forrest Halsey, the beautiful and talented star appears in the dual roles of Agnes and Laura Ward, twin sisters who are exactly opposite in character. "Ashes of Embers" has made a tremendous hit wherever it has so far been shown, not only on account of the inspired acting of Miss Frederick, but by reason of the artistic production by the Famous Players and the even work of the cast. The latter includes Earle Foxe, Frank Losee, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Herbert J. Frank, Jay Wilson and other able members of the Famous Players organization. This program also includs Burton Holmes Travelpictures, with "Bonnie Scotland" as the subject for this week, a new edition of the Pathe News, and "The Katzenjammer Kids," the latest cartoon novelty which has just been added to the Faurot's features.

Pretty Emmy Wehlen, the dainty Viennese actress who is a prime favorite with Faurot audiences, makes her re-appearance on the Metro program at the Faurot on Thursday and Friday in a photoplay that has been hailed by eastern reviewers as one of the finest productions of the year. It is entitled "The Pretenders" and the authors are Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, two brilliant writers who have many successful plays to their credit. It is full of action, with many unexpected happenings and a fine vein of suspense. Miss Wehlen is credited with a charming success as the young heiress, and her support, which includes Paul Gordon, Charles Eldridge, Kate Blancke and Edwin Holt certainly contains names of eminence. The settings and photography have been highly praised. "The Pretenders" will rank very high among the Faurot's admirable offerings for the week. It will be accompanied by a new comedy, "Papa by Proxy," with clever Max Figman in the leading role, and new Paramount Pictographs.

The Faurot's offering for next Saturday will be hailed with delight by its patrons, for the management has at last succeeded in securing a return booking of Marguerite Clark in "The Goose Girl." This is undoubtedly one of the biggest successes the popular Miss Clark has ever given to the screen. The production is made by Lasky from the famous romantic story of the same name by Harold McGrath and Miss Clark was especially engaged for the title role, through the courtesy of the Famous Players. The story is an entrancing one and Miss Clark's exquisite art has never shown with more brilliancy than in the role of the little Goose Girl who is a Princess by right of birth. The cast is a notable one. It includes Monroe Salisbury, Sidney Dean, James Neill, Page Peters, H. B. Carpenter, Ernest Joy and Jane Darwell, all prominent members of the Lasky company, which has also given the play a production has always been regarded as one of the finest ever made. "The Goose Girl" will be accompanied by new Metro Travelogues and "Mutt and Jeff" in "The Gay White Way."

ORPHEUM.

After three days of successful musical comedy the Orpheum will offer its many patrons a change in reverting back to vaudeville for the first three days of the coming week, starting with a special matinee Monday afternoon, October 16, at 2:30. Five excellent vaudeville acts are on the programme making a performance that will be hard to equal in popular price vaudeville. As one special attraction a refined and high class singing novelty, "At the Club", a musical satire with a quintette of excellent voices in a very novel offering, with the following cast Jess Calkins, Leonard McGarvey, Stanley Hannaford, Ed. Metcalfe and Jack Keller, music by George Botsford, Lyrics by Jean Havez. As an added feature the Five Juggling Normans, who are recognized in the theatrical world as being the greatest in their line in the world. The comedy section of the show is well taken care of by the following acts: The Two Macks in singing and whirlwind dancing; the Gray Ayer Duo in a comedy roller skating act, in which they offer some marvelous feats on the little rollers, as well as introducing some very laughable comedy; Jack and Jill in comedy singing, talking and dancing, and a very laughable reel of comedy pictures will complete one of the really worth while vaudeville programs of the season.

Tomorrow, a great Pathe five-reel motion picture feature, "The Light That Failed", with the well known star Robert Edeson supported by Jose Collins, Lillian Tucker and Claude Fleming, and all star cast. "The Light That Failed" is taken from the famous Rudyard Kipling, and is said to have made a wonderful picture. In addition to the great picture, special vaudeville numbers will be introduced between the reels, making a most enjoyable Sunday entertainment. One performance Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Continuous at night from 7 p. m. Better attend the afternoon performance and avoid the immense night crowds.

Coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 19, 20, 21, Anderson's Big Girl Revue, together with four other high class vaudeville acts.

"I understand that a two-headed calf was born in this neighborhood a few weeks ago."

"You betcha!" triumphantly replied the landlord of the tavern. "And the feller that owns it expects to make a fortune in the opery business showing it around at the fairs next fall in a tent."—Kansas City Star.

BONNYCLABBER.

New drinks have sometimes a glorious and brief popularity. Lord Straford, writing to Lord Cottington in 1635, extols "bonnyclabber," which he says "is the bravest, freshest drink you ever tasted. Your Spanish don would, on the heats of Madrid, hang his nose and shake his beard an hour over every sip he took of it, and take it to be the drink of the gods all the while."

No one, however, seems to know the exact composition of the seductive "bonnyclabber," although from an allusion to it by Ben Johnson it would seem to have been a mixture of beer and buttermilk.—London Chronicle.

THIRST FOR KNOWLEDGE.

Miss Bassett was talking to the class in history in her most impressive manner.

"Now, children," she said, looking over her pupils, "I want you to understand that the time to ask questions in my class is whenever anything is said which you wish explained. Do not wait until the time comes for recitation and then tell me you 'did not hear' or 'did not understand' when I talked to you."

The children replied, "Yes'm," in chorus.

"Very well," said teacher, "we will begin today with James I, who came after Elizabeth."

A scholar raised his hand.

"Well," queried Miss Bassett, graciously. "What is it?"

"What made him come after her?" asked the student, eagerly.—Exchange.

Rail Light Club Meets Stronger Team Tomorrow

Independent Squad Is Strengthened To Meet Fast Toledo Aggregation

Manager Callahan of the Independent club is taking no chances toward dropping the contest tomorrow afternoon with the Rail Lights. This is shown in his efforts to bolster up the strength of the team and place as many right hand hitters in the batting order of the club as possible.

After much difficulty the management of the local ball club was able to obtain the services of Bob Contchman, rated as one of the best pitchers in the International league this season. He will do the twirling for the locals.

Manager Callahan states that with the memory of the slugging ability of the Rail Light club fixed in his mind, which was clearly demonstrated in the contest with the local club here during the middle of the summer an attempt will be made to give them some strang twirling.

Another change in the line-up of the Lima team will be at the second [illegible] Flannery, the regular at [illegible] will be seen in action in left field and Bruno Betzel will hold down the second sack. This change will eliminate Harrison, who is a left handed hitter and would consequently be helpless against Bobby Curtis.

Little need be said in regard to the ability of Betzel, who is the regular third baseman for the St. Louis Nationals. There is little doubt but that the fans will be treated to some unusual fielding stunts around the keystone sack. Betzel in addition to shining as one of the best fielders in [illegible]

It is needless to say that the Independents expect one of the hardest battles of the season next Sunday. This is the second meeting of the season between the two clubs On the previous occasion the visitors defeated Lima.

However, even the most pessimistic fans are predicting a victory for the locals tomorrow. They advance the argument that the num[illegible]

During the season just about closed they have carved for themselves a place in the hall of fame ,according to baseball experts who have watched their work Their records for the season shows only a few games lost and these against some of the best National and American league clubs

In spite of the addition of several league players to the local club, the Rail Lights are still quoted as favorites at 10 to 7 in the betting. Reservations have been made by crowds of fans from Delphos, Celina and Wapakoneta. One of the largest crowds of the season is expected to witness the contest, which will be called promptly at 2:30 o'clock at Murphy street park.

The line-up of the Lima team will be as follows: Costello, cf; Long, ss, Betzel, 2b; Herring, c; Flannery, lf; Egan, rf; Malloy, 3b; McClellan, 1b, an Contchman, p. Carroll and Harrison will play the bench.

Games At Popular Prices

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—The annual series of games between the pennant winners of the American and National leagues for the baseball championship of the world will be played at popular prices in the future if Ban Johnson, president of the American league has his way.

"The world series as conducted at present," declared Mr. Johnson yesterday afternoon as he was about to leave for Chicago, "threatens to jeopardize the fair name of the game in the public opinion. We can never stand for that. Baseball is clean, it must be kept clean

"[illegible] by year prices have advanced until now the world series has assumed a mercenary character that was never intended and which which never be tolerated."

Tufts Vs. Tigers

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 14.—eyes of the eastern foot ball world are focused today upon the gridiron here where the Tigers will meet the fast, tricky Tufts eleven. It was Tufts that upset the foot ball dope [illegible] to be doling out an unexpected beating to Harvard. The [illegible] coaches today put their strongest team into the game to attempt to break the fast attack of the smaller college warriors.

Western Games

CHICAGO, Oct 14.- Chicago and Indiana, and Colgate and Illinois today hold the foot ball spotlight in the middle west The Marcous and Indians will stage in Chicago the first conflict for the conference championship

The meeting between Illinois and Colgate at Urbana will send together two of the huskiest teams of the west and east respectively The easterners went through last season with only one defeat, by Cornell, which piled up a top-heavy score and was the only team to score upon Colgate. Tufts Gives The Harvard Backers Quite a Surprise

By Frank G. Menke.

Shifting once again to the subject of the gridiron and the folks who cavort thereon, one realizes more and more that the days are over when a victory for a big-enrollment college are foregone conclusions when such institutions are pitted agains the "small fry" elevents.

Harvard's defeat by Tufts was a surprise—and yet it wasn't a shock to anwone but the Crimson folks. It became evident last season that the new style of football has made it possible to cloak the outcome of every football with a shroud of uncertainty. The era of beef and brawn being over, it means that victory is possible for a light tricky eleven.

And those small elevens threaten to "gum up" other big college outfits of a year agone.

The defeat of Harvard by Tufts ends the reign of the Crimson in the world of football temporarily, at least The Cambridge outfit snared nearly all the laurels over a four year sweep. But all things must come to an end. In Harvard's case it is not surprising Any team that loses Mahan, Brickley, Pennock, Hardwick and their co-stars, without finding a really brilliant successor, must crumble.

Have you been lamping the activities up New Haven way? If not, you've missed the news that Yale, under the tutelage of the T. A. D. Jones, has performed a return; that Yale theratens to batter her way again to the crest of the football world where she ruled for so long.

Nothing could be more impressive from a Yail viewpoint, nor could anything provoke greater enthusiasm than Yale's overwhelming victory over Virginia a week ago; the very same Virginia that doled out a beating to Yale in 1915 when one Alec Wilson was running—or trying to run—the Yale eleven.

Yale this season has shown tremendous line smashing power, a fast, tricky backfield, sureness in handling punts and a defense that grows stronger and stronger with each new test.

Bully for Jones!

The way that Pittsburgh snowed under Westminster in its debut of the season indicates that Pitt has even a more powerful aggregation than its unbeaten championship crew of 1915. Last year Pitt beat Westminster 32 to 0; this year it was 58 to 0, showing that the power of the Pitts attack is almost double that of 1915.

Princeton's work so far has been very good, but not really wonderful. It's line has shown itself as yet.

Syracuse threatens to smash all scoring records It has one of the most powerful elevens gathered together in recent years, with a crunching backfield and a defense made almost impregnable by two guards, one weighing 245 and the other 245. In its first game the Orange team scored a 57 to 0 victory, following with a 73 to 0 triumph against Ohio last Saturday. That makes 140 points in two starts—something worth while getting excited about.

Pennsylvania's second game of the year showed that Bob Folwell repaired some of the defects in the original makeup of the Philadelphia aggregation. Washington and Jefferson, under the new coaching of Sol Metzger, continues to bump its foes into oblivion, and Dartmouth certainly looks like Dartmouth of old. Whether appearances are decepiible will be shown in the later games against some of the bigger elevens.

LEWIS GUN CAUSES ROW IN THE ARMY.

This is the Lewis rapid-fire machine gun invented by Colonel Isaac Newton Lewis, a retired army officer, over which army factions are now fighting The last congress appropriated $12,000,000 to be expended on such guns, and the fact that the Lewis gun was adopted by the British and the Belgians and has been very successful was urged in its favor.

The Grace Five Again Figured To Lead Race

The Grace basketball team are going to repeat their wonderful record made last year in their games with teams from other cities at the Grace church gym, according to indications of last night's game, when they met and defeated the Brunswick Tigers by a score of 61 to 13. This was a practice game and is not considered as a scheduled game. The intercity season for Grace will probably open early in November.

At the sound of the referee's whistle for the start of the contest, the Grace lads started their scoring and heir opponents were unable to head them off. The team work of the church boys was responsible for the big score.

Stepleton, forward, counted most in the scoring. He registered 21 field goals, this being due to the system of passing and shooting. Guards of the opposing team were unable to break up the floor work.

The Grace team is again figured to draw large crowds at their gym the coming season, as no faster or cleaner games were ever witnessed in the city than wee played here last year A crowd that was large for such an early game of the indoor sport witnessed the affair last night.

RUSSIAN GENERAL FLEES AUSTRIAN PRISON.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 14—Unbounded enthusiasm has been aroused in the press and among the public here by the clever escape from an Austrian military prison of General Korniloff, one of the most brilliant of the Russian military leaders.

The general has been confined as a prisoner of war in an Austrian encampment for more than a year, ever since the famous retreat of the Russians from the Carpathians, when Korniloff was severely wounded and captured. He managed in a clever disguise to make his way to Bucharest.

Misinformed persons have been told the local company is reaping rich harvests from the local plant. Such is not the case. The above diagram shows the actual disbursement of the telephone dollar—of every dollar received by the local company. Note that the dividend rate is six per cent. It has never been higher. For several years it was four per cent. For a half-dozen years after the organization there was no dividend whatever.

An investor can get better interest on his money than that in scores of investments. Isn't the telephone company entitled to six per cent, especially in view of the fact that it was a long time coming?

DECLINES NOTED IN WALL ST. STOCKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The speculative element seemed uncertain in its operations at the beginning of business on the stock exchange today with some of the traders selling various stocks, while others were buyers of specialties and of issues in which resistance has been apparent for some time to bear drives. Republic Iron and Steel was the weakest feature, falling 1⅝ points to 61½ while Atlantic Gulf and West Indies rose 2¼ points to 92½. Wants to Know Why.

Why is it that a careless seven-year-old boy can drop a half-burned match in an alley and burn up all the barns in the block, while an abled-bodied man has to use up a box of matches to get a wood fire started in a heater that has draft enough to draw all the furniture up the stovepipe?—Lebanon Times.

NO HUSBAND IS PERFECT.

Don't expect all the virtues in one man. If he is good-natured he may be lazy; if he is scholarly he may be cold; if he is thirfty he may be stingy; if he is smooth he may be deceitful. The man who charms you with his immaculate appearance is likel yto be something of an old maid; the man who is careful to pick threads off your skirt is prone to pick flaws in you; the man who takes an undue interest in the selection of your hats may take an undue interest in the bill which comes home; the man who before marriage jumps to open the door, lest your fingers be contaminated by the knob, may after marriage allow those same fingers to be contaminated by the washboard.—Woman's Home Companion.

Tentative.

Their teacher had lately become engaged, and all the girls were tremendously interested — naturally. Everybody wanted to see the ring, and more than one was grievously disappointed in the size and splendor of the token. One ten-year-old maiden considered it critically and then remarked: "It's mighty small, ain't it? Does that mean that you haven't really quite made up your mind to take him?"

On the Bright Side.

There is a spirit of joy which leads all men of the fitter kind into battle. Whether by a dark fate, the struggle is carried on against national enemies, fought out with cannon and shrapnel, or whether it be a thing spiritual, a mere personal individual battle fought to the last ditch, does not much matter. To the fit and the strong of spirit, there is a personal happiness to be found in worthy conflict as nowhere else.

A want ad in the Times-Democrat will bring quick results.

Old Folks Saved From Suffering

Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Taunton, Mass., in her 87th year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial in my case."
Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and consider myself in a truly normal condition, which I attribute to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."
Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Miss., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and though I am 61 years of age, I feel like a 16-year-old girl."
Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening and up-building, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs.

Dedicate Greatest U. S. Irrigation Dam

GREAT $500,000 DAM.

ELEPHANT BUTTE, New Mexico, Oct 14.—The great $5,000,000 dam built across the Rio Grande river here by the United States government, was dedicated today, marking an epoch in agricultural development for section of New Mexico and Texas, and Mexico.

Government and state officials as well as thousands of residents of valley towns and cities witnessed the dedication ceremonies.

Andricus A. Jones, former assistant secretary of the interior, designated as the official representative of President Wilson at the ceremonies, made the principal address.

Mr. Jones declared that the president regarded the newly constructed dam as one of the monumental engineering projects of the world, and believed it opened up wonderful possibilities in the vast tracts of land to be irrigated. Prominent among those present at the dedication were Senators Fall and Catron of New Mexico; Senator Ashurst of Arizona, Senators Newlands and Pittman of Nevada, Senator Phelan of California, and Arthur P. Davis, chief engineer of the United States reclamation service.

Representative men from all parts of the United tSates, in attendance at the convention of the international irrigation congress, at El Paso, were here.

In storage capacity the Elephant Butte dam surpasses any dam ever constructed. The reservoir, when filled, will contain 856 billion gallons of water, enough water to cover the entire state of Delaware two feet deep. This is one third more than can be stored in the $17,000,000 Assouan dam in Egypt, and two-thirds more than the combined capacity of all the reservoirs built or projected for the city of Greater New York.

The dam will irrigate 185,000 acres of valuable farming and trucking land. The dam is 1,674 feet long at the top, contains 610,000 cubic yards of rubble concrete and weighs one million tons. Placed on a city lot 125 by 25 it would make a block of concrete one mile high The structure is 318 feet in height. The building of the dam was commenced three years ago.

WASHINGTON, Oct 14.—At the request of the International News Service, the department of the interior, Franklin K. Lane, secretary, has prepared the following statement showing the importance to the United States of the great Elephant Butte dam irrigation project dedicated today:

"The dedication of the Elephant Butte dam marks an important epoch in the development of what is probably the oldest agricultural section in our country. This structure, blocking a canyon of the Rio Grande 120 miles north of El Paso, Texas, is the greatest storage dam in the world. It is of rubble concrete, impressive in proportions, and its construction within a period of five years is regarded as a distinct achievement by the engineering profession. From the lowest point in the foundation to the top of the parapet wall its height is 318 feet On top, including spillways, it is 1,674 feet long, and provides a road way 16 feet wide across the canyon. At the base the dam is 235 feet thick. Its contents are 610,000 cubic yards and its weight is about 1,000,000 tons.

"Among the five imposing dams constructed by the reclamation service (Arrowrock 348 feet high, Shoshone 328 feet high, Roosevelt 284 feet high, and Pathfinder 218 feet high) the Elephant Butte dam ranks third in height and first in volume and in the capacity of its reservoir.

"In respect to the storage created by it the dam ranks first in the world. The reservoir is a lake 45 miles long, average depth 65 feet, and with a shore line of 200 miles It stores the entire flood and normal flow of the Rio Grande, which drains 30,000 square miles of territory above it. When full it will contain 115 billion cubic feet of water, or sufficient to cover 2,642,292 acres a foot deep.

"Actual laying of the dam began in 1911 after a bypass or flume had been constructed which turned the river around one side of the excavation. For a year or more men worked from 80 to 100 feet below the river bed, constantly in danger of sudden floods. Without mishap the foundation was brought up above the danger line, after which the work was prosecuted vigorously.

"Preliminary to actual construction the government laid out a town equipped with modern conveniences, such as electric light, water and sewerage systems, stores, schools, hospital, hotels, Y M. C. A., and a motion picture theatre. It was a city of 4,000 inhabitants at times, and entirely under the jurisdiction of the engineers. A railway 13 miles in length, through exceedingly rough country, was constructed to connect the camp with a main line railroad. Over the government line hundreds of thousands of tons of cement, machinery, materials and supplies were carried.

"The dam and reservoir are the larger features of a very elaborate irrigation system designed to water 185,000 acres of land embraced in four valleys lying below the storage basin. For each of these valleys a diversion dam and main canals are being constructed. About 160,000 acres of these lands are in New Mexico and Texas, and the balance being in old Mexico in the vicinity of Juarez.

"The general elevation of the irrigable area is 3,700 feet above the sea level, and the climate is mild and equable throughout the year. Temperature ranges from zero to 100 degrees above, and the rainfall is about 10 inches annually. Soils are fertile alluvium and sandy loam, producing large yields of alfalfa, corn, wheat, melons, fruits and vegetables Dairying and stock-raising are profitable industries

"More than one-half of the irrigable lands on the project are today in a virgin state, but only a small acreage is public domain. Homeseekers, however, will find excellent opportunities to purchase In order to safeguard settlers from speculators the two water users' associations, comprising all the land owners, are co-operating with the reclamation service of Washington in a general plan of settlement. There is room here for 1,000 new families."

JACK HORNER IS ACCORDED A HIGH HONOR IN CAVALRY

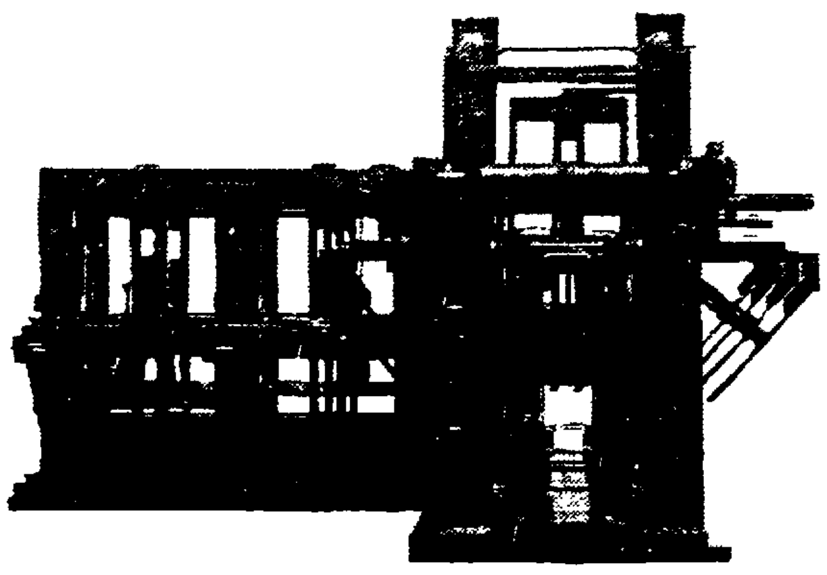
A high honor was conferred on Jack Horner, member of Company C, Second regiment, stationed on the Mexican border at El Paso, Texas, when he was selected from among 500 contestants as the best horseman in the Ohio cavalry

Young Horner has a host of friends in this city who will be pleased to hear of the honor. The fact that the selection was made from among such a large number of competitors gives it all the more prestige.

PIG'S BONES USED AS TOYS.

One of the pet games played by Russian children is known as babki, or pig bones. It is similar to the American game of tenpins, but the bones of a pig's legs are used. On the vast Russian estates, where the peasants make many of the toys for the master's children, the bones of pigs are thus utilized.—Exchange.

New Invention for Concrete Building.



The accompanying illustration is that of quite an ingenious invention of J. S. Van Gisen of 471 east Pearl street, of this city, on a machine for erecting concrete walls. Patent rights have been issued. It is claimed by the inventor that this machine will erect concrete structures of any size, shape or height at less cost and also in less time than by any other process. Mr. Van Giesen conceived the idea while working at concrete work on construction at Litchville N. D. about a year ago. He is living in Lima at present and is endeavoring to dispose of his patent, or to arrange to get the same on the market.

The photo of the machine it aken from the model which the inventor has set up in the city. The machine is set up by placing studding on a bottom plate upright position, about nine inches apart, in a double row, and equipped with straight gear in front with keys which slide to support a set of vertical upright keys which slide or elevate the key blocks Form boards are set behind the keys, and as fast as the keys are elevated they release the form boards, the scaffold arrangement being interlocked into the key work thereby when keys are elevated, the scaffold railing with the keys. The arrangement is such that a straight wall is assured, and all material can be used over and over again. The machine is designed to save labor, time and material.

The inventor is open to a proposition on handling this machine, and invites inspection of his model

Eighty-seven applications were filed, but two of these have been withdrawn and six men have been refused licenses in Lima. Those to whom licenses were refused are: William M. Bryan, proprietor of the Sherman House; Daniel M. Kelly, 792 North Main street; Brice W. Blair, 133 East Market street; Ralph Hooker, 214 South Main street; Henry J Sauer, 336 North Main street; Peter Keiper, 15 Public Square.

The six refused licenses may appeal. The hearing will be next Wednesday. The men were refused licenses because of having been convicted in court of violating the state laws. A number of these cases are now pending in court of common pleas.

Fred Harrison withdrew his application for a renewal at 313 North Central avenue. He notified the board that he intended to quit the saloon business forever. Antimo Vastano, who asked a license for a saloon in Perry township, has withdrawn his application.

PORT CLINTON—A delay on part of the outgoing mail of this city may be blamed to Uncle Sam, due to persons depositing letters in the new steel boxes labeled "please help to keep our city clean," the object of the receptacles being to hold waste paper and rubbish.

DREAMER AWAKENS IN HOSPITAL WARD

CLEVELAND, Oct 14.—Jacob Schrieber, 56, early this morning was wandering through a grassy field A cow crossed his patch and he gave chase. The path led to the edge of a cliff, over which the cow plunged. Schrieber, following at too speed, was unable to stop and toppled after the bovine. A few hours later he woke up. A white-capped nurse was bending over him and soothing his brow. He ached in every muscle, and all his bones seemed broken.

"Was the cow injured?" he inquired.

"Oh, that was a dream," she said after he explained. "You walked out of your bed-room window"

Schriber is recovering in Glenville hospital.

I have often advised other kidney sufferers to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. All railroaders who are subject to kidney ailments, would do well to use Doan's Kidney Pills."
